

September 1, 2011

Rae Anne Rushing, P.E., LEED AP to retire from the Design and Construction Industry!

Rae Anne Rushing is many things; a natural leader, an engineer, an entrepreneur and a visionary. It was these traits and her vision for a strong, creative, truly integrated, engineering firm that led Rae Anne to start Rushing Company six years ago.

It is this same vision and entrepreneurial spirit that now leads Rae Anne to retire from the Design and Construction Industry after 23 years.

In the past 6 years, Rae Anne and Scott Rushing have built the company from just 2 mechanical engineers to what it is today; a successful, integrated group of 30 individuals comprising multiple studios including: mechanical engineering, electrical engineering, sustainability consulting, energy services, and commissioning.

Since its inception, Rushing has completed over 550 projects, certified more than 100 LEED projects, volunteered our time to advance local codes, achieved LEED-CI Platinum for our own office, and worked with the Clinton Global Initiative to engage young girls in science and engineering fields, among other accomplishments.

Co-founder, Scott Rushing, will be moving into the role of President and CEO. Rushing will continue its growth and evolution, along the course Rae Anne set, as a provider that differentiates itself through a client centric and collaborative approach, technical capabilities, and sensitivity to the impacts of our actions. Scott and the company's current leadership have been working closely with Rae Anne to ensure a seamless shift by year end.