Rushing Announces Two New Hires

(SEATTLE) – Rushing, a Seattle engineering and sustainability consulting firm, has hired Craig Gagner and Shawn Gavras.

Gagner brings 34 years experience in general construction, design/build contracting, mechanical engineering, and as a commissioning test engineer. He is currently performing commissioning services for Children’s Hospital’s new Life Sciences Research Center and the Escala multi-use high-rise project, and Energy Star evaluations for the Continental Plaza and Olympic Block projects.

Gavras is a senior mechanical engineer whose expertise is derived from his experience in both the consulting engineering and construction industries. He is currently working on the new Yale Office Campus, the Avalon Bay Ballard new mixed-use complex, and MDS Pharma lab/research facility in Bothell.

Founded in 2006, Rushing is an engineering firm located in Seattle. They offer a wide range of services including mechanical engineering, building modeling, commissioning and electrical engineering. In addition, they provide sustainability consulting through Blackbird Studio. www.rushingco.com
